The Davoted and Deserted Wife.

He comes not—I have watched the sun go down, But yet he comes not. Once it was not so. He thinks not how these bitter tears do flow. The white he holds the riot in the town; Yet he will come and chide, and I shall weep, And he will wake my infant fr m his eleep, To blend his feeble wailings with my tears.

Of how I love a mother's match to keep Over these alceping eyes; that smile which cheen My heart, though sunk in sorrow fixed and deep. I had a husband once who loved me—now He ever wears a from upon his brow. And feeds his passion on a wanten's lip. As bees from laurel flowers a poison sip.

But yet I cannot hatel O! there were hours When I could hape forester and have When I could hang forever on his eye, And Time, who stole with allent witness by, Strewed, as he hurried on, his path with flowers.

Strewed, as he nurried on, his pain with howers. I loved him then—he loved me too. My heart Still finds its fondness kindle if he smile; The memory of our loves will ne'er depart; And though he often sting me with a dart, Venomed and barbed, and waste upon the vile Caresses which his babe and mine should share—Though he should spurn me—I will calmly bear His madness; and should sickness come and lay Its paralyzing hand upon him, then I would with kindness all my wroogs repay, Until the penitent should weep, and say How injured and how faithful I had been.

If these things are well done, and the teeth are kept plugged in a finished style, teeth naturally or hereditarily "poor" may be kept in a good state of preservation for many years.

All forms of dyspepsia have a direct tendency to destroy the teeth. Whatever causes acfor which the New Englanders have been noted. It is a fine stomach is ruinques to the teeth. A The Bulletin says:

The Ohio Statesman

Mrs. Cunningham Burdell has turned up in the sentimental role in California. We quote from the the San Francisco Miyror:

During a late ball season, a gentleman, who in his native city had figured as one of the "pinks of fashioa," determined upon creating a sensation. He had amassed by diligence and economy some five thousand dollars, on the strength of which he had resolved to cut the fortification. An embrasure is the hole or opening through which this fluid becomes vitiated, weak, and poor. Being in the circulation, it were water to be whole body, and may burst out in disease on any part of it. No organ is free from fortifications. Loop holes are openings in wails to fire the whole or fellow of infinite sest, and was not to be put down when he had made up his mind to any undertaking. As a preliminary step, therefore, he purchased a showy wardrobe and indulged in a variety of jewelry, which swept off at once some five hundred dollars of his capital.

For some evenings Muffy haunted the various concerns and ball rooms without attracting anything like the attention he had anticipated. At length Muff is conscious of an improvement; on one evening at a ball of the Sons of Celibacy or some such Order, as he stood in a gazeful I leved him then—he leved me too. My heart Still finds that form the time of our leves windle if he smile; The memory of dur leves will ne'er depart; And though he often sting me with a dart, Yenomed and barbed, and wasie upon the vile Caresses which his babe and mine should share—Though he should spur me—I will calmly bear His madness; and should sickness come and lsy I would with kindness all my wroogs repey. Until the penitent should weep, and say How lejured and how faithful I had been.

The Testh.

Natural teeth, clean, sound and perfect, are essential to the comeliness of any human face. Defective teeth mar the handsomest features, and cause us to turn away our gaze with a kind which she maneuvered her fan. They individed a loof from the throng, during the promenade, he observed that the eyes of every lady were fastened on him in passing, and that a conversation cusued, with a backward reference to himself. He increased attitude—they redoubled their attentions. An elegantly attired lady, "fair, fat, and forty," who had been sitting by herself for some time on one of the benches, attracted his regards. He made a desperate shove and introduced himself. In a moment they were entangled in the mazes of the Lancers. The lady was well informed and vivacious, and belonged to one of the first essential to the comeliness of any human face.
Defective teeth mar the handsomest features, and belonged to one of the first families, as he felt assured by the manner in said cause us to turn away our gaze with a kind which she maneuvered her fan. They indulged

Defective teeth mar the handsomest features, and cause us to turn away our gaze with a kind of diagnast from a countenance otherwise fault-leasly beautiful. Sound teeth not only add to the comfort and personal appearance, but contribute largely to the health of all; hence special and scrupulous attention should be paid to them daily, from early ohlidhood, from the time when the first permanent tooth makes its appearance, about the sixth year.

Whenever it is practicable, every tooth in a child's head should be minutely examined by a careful conscientious and skillful dentiat every few months; and the great importance of special attention to their cleanliness, the avoidance of cold and hot drinks, of the use of any "picks" harder than wood or quills, and of all dentrifices prepared by unknown hands, should be impressed upon the minds of the young with great assiduty.

Harm has been done by propagating the notion that sugar is injurious to the teeth, by diverting attention from real causes of destruction or decay. The eating of any amount of pure sugar cannot injure the teeth directly, because it has no residue; it is wholly dissolved, and passes into the stomach.

But let it be remembered that the practice of cating sugars or candies or any other sweetmeats largely, will inevitably cause a disorder of the stomach and generate gases there, which will speedily undermine the health of the teeth.

By insisting too much on the fact that sugare and candies destroy the teeth, an impression will grow that if these ere mainly avoided, the personness of the summer in which she manuer the whole the document of the sum of the total together to the supper room, and not necessary to the evening together—being the observers.

The genuine, thundering Western man, who tablespoonful of the purest syrup of loaf-sugar, taken three times a day before meals, will destroy the tone of the healthiest stomach in a very short time. And when it is remembered how many patent medicines are made up in the form of syrups and sweet iozonges, and how common the use of them has become, it need not be wondered at that every second or third person met on the street, knows the meaning of "sour atomach," or dyspepsia. It has been shown that if a sound tooth be steeped in syrup for some days, is becames a soft, pulpy mass. That does not prove that it is injurious to the teath, because it was a dead tooth; and, further, such a steeping of a live tooth is impossible. The gastric juice begins to eat up the stomach. So it is inconclusive to reason from the living to the eadd, or otec versa.

It is urged by many that calomel is a most deadly agent to the teeth, and yet if a sound tooth is soaked for weeks together in a solution of calomel, no apparent effect whatever is produced on it.

So far from sugars and pure candies injuring the teeth or the health, they would, it used wisely and in moderation, as sole desserts, be actual preservatives of both; especially if alternated, as desserts, with fruits and berries in their natural, raw, ripe, fresh, perfect state, by banishing from our tables the prestierous pic, the leaden pudding, and pastries and cakes of every name, which, as desserts, always tempt

Let the spirit of this article be distinctly understood. Pure sugars and candies do not injure the teeth, except indirectly by their injudicious use inciting acidity of stomach or dyspepsia, as will any other kind of food or drink, or beverage, if extravagantly used.

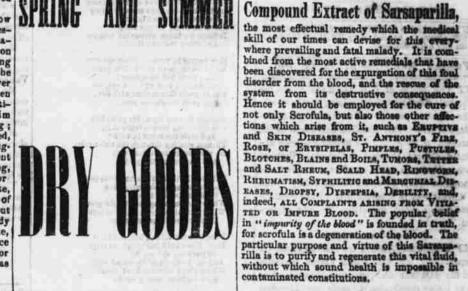

At seasons of the year when fruits and berries may not be had, ripe, fresh and perfect, as desserts, pure sugars and candies may be used as such in their stead to great advantage, because they are healthful, being warming, nutritious and agreeable; hence, as a table article, they are very valuable, while the almost universal love of them shows that they were intended to be eaten. If a child is not allowed to eat anything containing sugar, it willsicken and die in a very short time. Children need the carbon, the fuel contained in sugar, to keep them warm; without it they would perish from cold; hence the love of sweet things is an instinct, implanted by the kind and wise Maker of us all for the child's preservation. There are a parcel of stupid creatures in the world whose sole stock in trade of brains and logic amounts to this, "that whiatever is good is unhealthy." It is not advised "Planting descris, bridging oceans, Bridging the coral stars."
